LEGISLATIVE ALERT

PROPOSED LEGISLATION
filed by the
DEPT. OF PUBLIC HEALTH
VITAL RECORDS TASK FORCE

Extensive study and analysis of this legislation is needed to safeguard access for genealogical research. The following report is submitted by Shirley M. Barnes, Director of Civil Records.

The Massachusetts Genealogical Council Committee on Civil Records has formed a genealogical Task Force to study proposed legislation filed by the Dept. of Public Health as a House bill for action in the 1993 session of the state legislature. It is long and complicated. A DPH Task Force on Vital Records has been working for a year and a half on revisions to the Massachusetts General Laws concerning births, deaths and marriages.

The present section 2 of Chapter 46 of the MGL says the town clerk will preserve all returns of births, marriages and deaths and shall conveniently arrange them for examination. This makes these records available to research, and certainly implies that they are public records, under the generally understood meaning of that phrase. This whole concept has been removed.

Original records would be filed at the state level only, with copies to the towns. A new repository would need to be built, and more employees would be needed. Most requests for copies of records would have to go to the state, as towns would not be notified of residents born or dying in other towns. A surcharge of $2.00 per each certificate requested is to be added to the cost of each certificate.

Records are to be closed for research and copies for a 50 year period for marriages and deaths, and a ninety year period for births, if you are not closely related to the person for whom you are requesting the copy. Genealogical research would be controlled by regulations decided upon by the Dept. of Public Health. These regulations would be reviewed by a permanent vital records improvement committee, chaired by the Registrar. One of the public members of this committee is to represent the genealogical community. We are asking that there be 2 public members chosen from a list submitted by the Massachusetts Genealogical Council. We are also asking that members of a genealogical society legally incorporated in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts be added to the list of those who would be allowed to receive copies and inspect records.

We object to the provision which would allow the destruction of ORIGINAL records after reproductions have been made.

We would prefer that the present section 2 of Chapter 46, and section 2A remain the law. The Registry has been trying to close the records for almost 20 years, under various arguments for confidentiality. The latest one is welfare fraud.

The bill proposes that marriage and death records from 1900 to 1945 be transferred to the State Archives, while calling for the closing of any records less than 50 years old. Only birth records over 90 years old would go to the Archives, which is the way the law passed in 1983 handles transfer. But the 1983 law does NOT close records to us. It preserves the old records, and makes them totally public at the state and local levels.
There have also been restrictions placed on inspection or examination of causes of death. Only upon specific request of the spouse, children, parents, other next of kin of the decedent, guardian, informant named on the death certificate, executor, or respective authorized representative can cause of death be examined. A person tracing familial deaths or numbers of deaths in an area would have to have permission of the Registrar or town clerk. It has always been accepted that there is no privacy in death, thus the records have always been open to inspection.

This bill also proposes a surcharge of $10.00 for filing for marriage intentions, which would make marriage intentions at least $25.00 in some towns. This surcharge is excessive compared to that of $2.00 for certificate copies. This surcharge money is to go into a (to be established) vital record improvement fund. There is nothing in the proposed legislation to say who would really control this fund, nor how it would be allocated to the Registry of Vital Records, to the State Archives, (which come under the Secretary of State, not the DPH,) or to the towns. A great amount of money could go into this fund with no legislative controls. It would not go into the General Fund, which is fine, but there should be written directions for allocation, probably on a percentage basis.

There will be a public hearing by the Joint Committee on Government Regulations, probably late March or early April, at the State House. STAY ALERT FOR THE DATE, AND PLAN TO ATTEND. You do not need to speak, but we need many genealogists there to impress the committee.

If one's mother runs off with a traveling salesman, it is considered scandalous.

But if one's great-great-grandmother did so, ah, that's romance!

Half of the misunderstandings between Britain and America are due to the fact that neither will regard the other as what it is, in an important sense of the word, a foreign country. Each thinks of the other as a part of itself which has somehow gone off the lines, what would have been pardonable in a foreigner is blame worthy in a cousin.

EDITOR’S RUMINATIONS

From time to time this column will appear in the newsletter to emphasize, reinforce, supplement, reflect and explain either the other articles in the current issue or a previous issue. Commentary expressed in this column is solely the opinion of the editor and does not necessarily reflect the position of the MGC.

Genealogy has been called the "later life hobby" and at many of the conferences we have attend a visual scanning of the participants would seem to confirm this characteristic. However there is another audience that we have discovered that is not so evident and not as addicted to long term dedication to the hobby but is very curious and that portends well for the future - our school age children (i.e. grandchildren) who are doing projects for a school report. Your editor's grandchildren have done genealogical reports for their school but I don't think this is an isolated experience as I have talked to quite a few people who have had the same experience. And most significant was the story of friends, a couple with five grandchildren, who told me that one of their grandchildren had visited them and asked a lot of questions about her "ancestors" for a school assignment that led this couple to go searching for answers for their grandchild. Well, can you guess what happened? Yes, they got to digging and before they realized what was happening the bug had bitten them and they are now confirmed genealogy addicts. One explanation for this phenomenon postulates that Alex Haley's book and the TV mini series Roots was the inspiration for the inclusion of genealogical projects in the school curriculum. This is a seed that has been planted at a young age and may well under the pressures of growing up, getting educated, earning a living and having a family of their own remain dormant for many years but it also may, in the leisure of their later years, burst into bloom.

In the previous issue of this newsletter we attempted to praise the work of the organizers of the September New England Conference at Sturbridge. Maybe there was a minor glitch here and there in the program but over all it was a resounding success that reflected the immense time and effort these people gave to make it happen. Let's give them another round of applause and call for an ENCORE!

ABOUT BONES

In every organization you will find five kinds of "bones". Do you recognize any of these bones in your genealogy society?

1. The WISHBONES, they spend their time wishing their society was a success instead of working for it.

2. The JAWBONES, they talk about the society being a success but do little else.

3. The KNUCKLEBONES, they knock everything that everyone else is doing.

4. The BACKBONES, they put their shoulder to the wheel and get the job done.

5. And thank heavens for the FUNNYBONES, they make us laugh when we need it.
